OUTCOME / BENEFITS TO THE COMMUNITY

That residents and businesses will understand how consultation will take place with the community on planning policy documents and planning applications, so enabling the council's decisions to be influenced by local opinion.

RECOMMENDATION

The Executive Member for Business, Economic Development and Strategic Planning and Executive Member for Planning and Enforcement agree that Wokingham Borough Council:

- 1) Consults on the draft Statement of Community Involvement as contained in Appendix A.

SUMMARY OF REPORT

The council adopted its existing Statement of Community Involvement (SCI) in 2014. Since then, there have been changes to national planning policy and guidance.

As a result of these changes, a review of the SCI is required to ensure it remains up to date. This report seeks authority to consult on the draft SCI which is contained within Appendix A.

Background

What is a Statement of Community Involvement?

A Statement of Community Involvement (SCI) is a document that councils are required to produce that sets out how consultation will take place with the community on planning policy documents and planning applications.

The SCI provides clarity on the extent of community involvement that will take place. It further sets out clear consultation procedures and standards that will be followed, so providing transparency for residents and businesses.

Analysis of Issues

Why produce a new SCI?

The council adopted its existing SCI in 2014. Since then there have been changes to national planning policy and guidance, for example it is now a requirement for a SCI to incorporate guidance on how the council will support communities producing neighbourhood plans.

As a result of these changes, a review of the SCI is required to ensure it remains up to date. The main changes to this draft SCI from the existing 2014 version are:

- New introductory chapter;
- New section on Neighbourhood Planning, setting out the ways that we will support groups undertaking neighbourhood plans;
- Increased clarity on the type of engagement activity that people can expect at each stage of the production of planning policy documents;.
- Updated planning applications section to reflect current process timescales.

What consultation will take place?

The draft SCI will be subject to the same consultation procedures as currently defined in the adopted SCI and relevant national regulations. This will be for a period of 6 weeks.

What are the next steps

Following the closure of the consultation, all responses will be carefully considered and an amended draft SCI prepared. This will be reported to a future meeting of the council's Executive for adoption.

FINANCIAL IMPLICATIONS OF THE RECOMMENDATION

The Council faces severe financial challenges over the coming years as a result of the austerity measures implemented by the Government and subsequent reductions to public sector funding. It is estimated that Wokingham Borough Council will be required to make budget reductions in excess of £20m over the next three years and all Executive decisions should be made in this context.

1. Introduction

Planning affects the lives of all of us:

- the homes we live in;
- the leisure facilities we use;
- the places we go shopping;
- the open spaces we relax in;
- the places we go to work;
- the ways we travel

All of these (and more) are there because of planning decisions. For a lot of people planning is something they only get involved with when development has a direct impact on them. Even then, involvement can often be frustratingly too late to really influence the process.

By getting involved in planning from its earliest stages, residents, businesses and other interested parties can take an active role in shaping decisions about the future of where we live and work, and help create better and more sustainable communities beyond just the immediate places where they live and work.

This Statement of Community Involvement (SCI) sets out how Wokingham Borough Council (WBC) will involve people in planning decisions. The document includes an explanation of what an SCI is, provides a brief overview of the planning system, and then explains how you can get involved in planning decisions and what you can expect from us along the way.

What is a Statement of Community Involvement and why are we producing a new one?

Firstly, what actually is a Statement of Community Involvement (SCI)? An SCI is a document that sets out how we find out what you think. This means how consultation will take place with the community, businesses and others during the preparation of planning policy and the consideration of planning applications. Councils are legally¹ required to produce an SCI and make it available on their website for the public to access.

The SCI provides clarity on the extent of community involvement that will take place. It sets out clear consultation procedures and standards that will be followed, providing transparency for residents, businesses and others.

The SCI is being updated now because since WBC adopted its existing SCI in 2014, there have been changes to national planning policy and guidance. For example, it is now a requirement for an SCI to incorporate guidance on the support that is available for communities producing neighbourhood plans (see chapter 5 for more details).

As a result of these changes, a review of the SCI has been undertaken. This draft revised SCI will be subject to the same consultation procedures as draft supplementary planning documents (see chapter 6). The final version when adopted, will supersede the existing SCI.

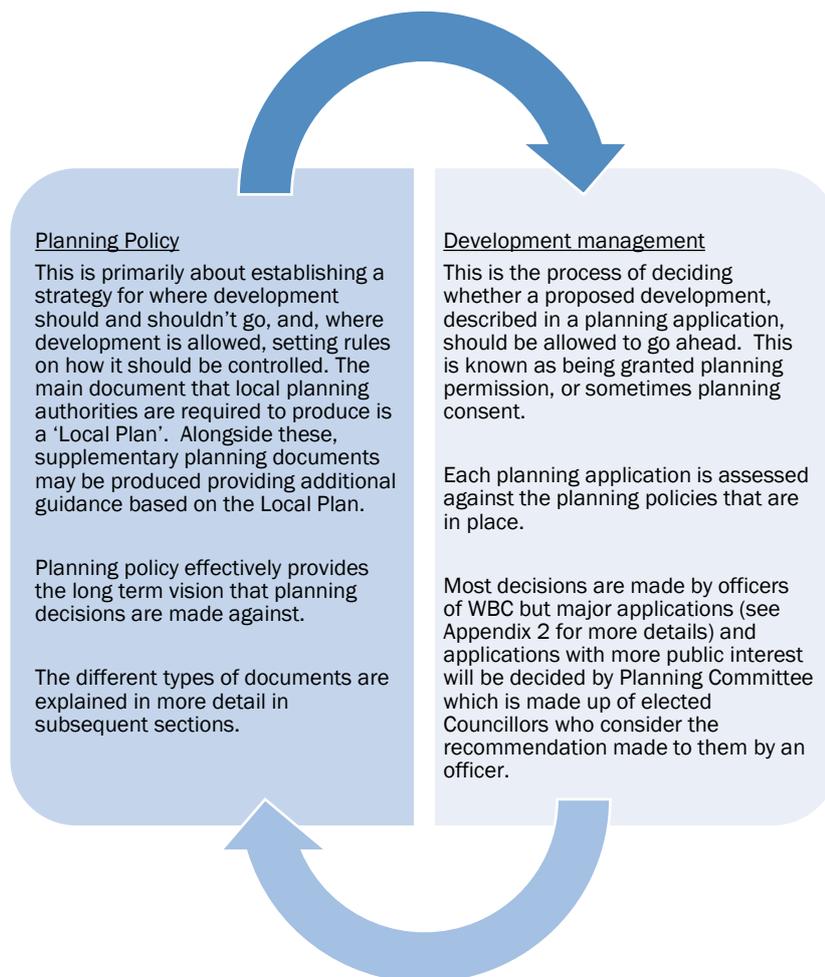

What is planning?

The planning system in England manages the use and development of buildings and land with the overall aim of creating better places to live, work and play.

The system helps society to strike a balance between allowing development to meet public need (by providing homes, jobs, shops and transport) and enhancing and conserving the environment. Without a planning system, anyone could construct whatever buildings they liked or use land in any way they wanted, no matter what effect this would have on places and other people in the area. There are two main parts to the planning system:

WBC is the Local Planning Authority for the borough, and, as a unitary authority, is responsible for both planning policy and development management. In some areas of the country, responsibility for some issues are split between the district council and the county council.

2. Wokingham's approach to consultation

Who should get involved?

Planning is more effective when the people it affects are an integral part of the process. Greater involvement can help shape planning solutions that maximise the positive outcome and minimise any negatives. Although some decisions are difficult, through engagement, the choices will be better understood and the outcome is more likely to be the most suitable.

The importance of good community engagement in planning is set out in national government policy in the National Planning Policy Framework (NPPF). The wider community who are affected by planning issues include not only residents but also a range of local businesses and public and private organisations (including national bodies such as Historic England, the Environment Agency and Natural England) that provide expert advice on key issues. Landowners and developers are key stakeholders in the planning system given that they influence the land that might be available for development and are the ones who submit planning applications. Landowners and developers are encouraged to engage positively with WBC and residents in the planning policy process and when drawing up proposals for development.

WBC expects that its duty to engage the community in planning matters should be matched by the efforts of developers, through the use of the Three Principles (Figure 2):

The system for planning where homes and other development will take place in the future is complicated but the key messages are simple and we are determined to help as many people join the conversation as possible. People often have important information and local knowledge of where they live, work and visit, which can be invaluable in making the best decisions.

As part of any community engagement, WBC will meet the following standards and expects all others who undertake consultations to do the same:

- Involvement will be open to all regardless of gender, faith, race, disability, sexuality, age and social deprivation.
- We will seek views of interested and affected parties as early as possible.
- Consultation documents will be clear and concise and avoid unnecessary jargon, without understating the complexities of any decision.
- Consultation outcomes will be made accessible to the public.

The following chapters provide greater detail on the methods of consultation that we will use in the preparation of different types of planning policy documents and on planning applications.

3. Local Plan

What is a Local Plan?

Local Plans are the main planning policy document. They set out priorities and policies for development, including the vision for managing development within the area.

Local plans must include 'strategic policies' to address the development and land use priorities of the Local Planning Authority area. 'Strategic policies' should look over a minimum period of 15 years and the kinds of issues they should cover are set out at paragraph 20 of the NPPF.

Local plans also must include non-strategic policies which will include things like sustainable design and construction of new development. Local Plans will also include allocations which set out where particular types of development will take place over the plan period (usually around 15 years) and also contain a key diagram showing important constraints and geographical contexts of the borough. The broad process is outlined in the figure below:

The Local Planning Authority has to draw up its local plan in consultation with the community. This involves numerous stages, from evidence gathering and scoping what should be covered, to drafting a strategy and consulting on this, and it then must also be considered at an independent public examination and gain Council approval before it can be adopted. Table 1 below provides an overview of these stages in the first column.

The Local Plan forms part of what is known as the Development Plan (which also includes ‘made’ Neighbourhood Plans). Planning legislation requires that planning applications must be determined in accordance with the Development Plan unless other material considerations indicate otherwise.

*These two plan documents will be replaced by the Local Plan Update when adopted.

What consultation methods will we use?

There are minimum consultation requirements set out in the regulations that we must follow in preparing a Local Plan. We will however strive to go beyond the minimum that is required. Table 1 below also sets out things that we would like to do but may not always be able to.

How We Will Use Your Comments?

Any comments and representations made on the plan during the public engagement stages will be recorded by the Council and used to amend the plan if appropriate to do so. The comments that are received from the community involvement exercises will form part of the evidence base for the plan.

4. Supplementary Planning Documents

What is a Supplementary Planning Document?

Supplementary Planning Documents (SPDs) provide additional guidance to support the Local Plan. They may provide guidance on a topic area or provide guidance for a site or sites. They are a consideration when deciding planning applications.

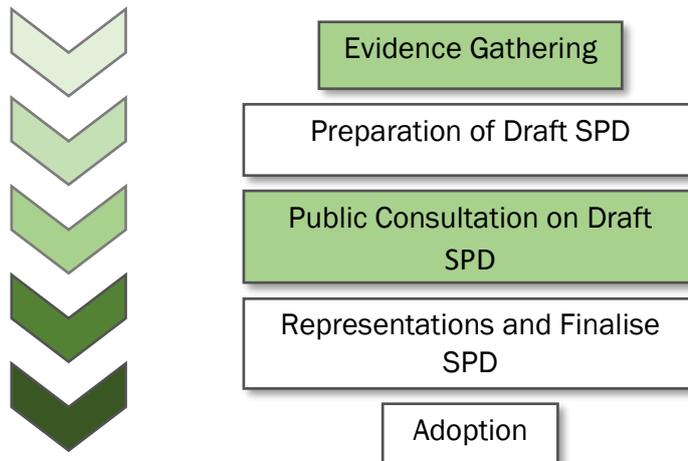

The process for preparing an SPD is similar to the initial stages of a Local Plan, however, as they expand upon existing policy, they are not subject to independent examination by a planning Inspector. More information on the process is detailed below.

What consultation methods will we use?

As with Local Plan documents there are minimum consultation requirements set out in the regulations that we must follow. We will however strive to go beyond the minimum that is required of us. Table 2 below also sets out things that we would like to do but may not always be able to.

Table 2 – SPD consultation methods

How We Will Use Your Comments?

Any comments and representations made on SPDs during the public engagement stages will be recorded by the Council and used to amend the SPD if appropriate to do so.

None statutory guidance

From time to time we may also produce non-statutory guidance which does not have SPD status. If this is the case we would expect to carry out consultation in the same manner as for SPDs as detailed above.

5. Neighbourhood Planning

What is a Neighbourhood Plan?

Neighbourhood planning was introduced through the Localism Act 2011 and is a means for local communities to take the lead on shaping how their area is developed. Communities can prepare Neighbourhood Plans (often referred to as Neighbourhood Development Plans) which set out specific, non-strategic⁵ planning policies to help shape and guide development in their area. Neighbourhood Plans sit alongside the Local Plan in being the starting point for considering planning applications.

It is important to note that Neighbourhood Plans cannot promote less development than set out in the Local Plan and cannot influence planning decisions already made. They should support the delivery of strategic policies contained in local plans and should shape and direct development that is outside of these strategic policies.

In areas with parish and town councils, a Neighbourhood Plan must be prepared by those organisations.

What is a Neighbourhood Development Order?

Communities can also prepare Neighbourhood Development Orders (including community right to build orders). Through these, certain types of development, which is supported by the community, are automatically granted planning permission without the need to go through the usual process. For example, this could be certain types of extensions to houses or improvements to shop fronts.

Consultation methods

The town or parish council is responsible for public consultation and engagement in the earlier stages of the process, whilst WBC undertakes consultation on the final draft version of the plan, arranges for an Independent Examination of the plan to take place, and organises the referendum stage of the process on behalf of the parish/town council. Consultation methods are set out in the table below and more information on the process is detailed in Figure 6.

⁵ See paragraphs 17 – 23 of the National Planning Policy Framework for more detail on strategic and non-strategic policies.

The Inspector may have additional questions of the parish/town council or respondees and may choose to set up hearing sessions, though typically the examination is via submissions in writing. The Examiner will give their view on whether the plan meets the basic conditions⁶ and if so whether it should progress to referendum. If there is a positive referendum result (more than half the votes cast support the plan) a neighbourhood plan becomes part of the development plan for the borough. It therefore will have the same weight in the planning decision making process as other development plan documents such as those referred to in the sections above	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • The Council will appoint an examiner on behalf of the qualifying body and publish the Examiner’s report on its website • Council will publish notice for the referendum in accordance with the regulations on its website. • Provide advice to the neighbourhood group about neutral promotional material they can publish to advertise the referendum • Council will declare result of referendum on its website • Council will publish the adoption statement on its website 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Appropriate use of social media to publicise referendum and adoption 	Adoption must take place within 8 weeks of a successful referendum.

⁶ Set out at paragraph 8(2) of schedule 4B of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 as introduced through the Localism Act 2011 – see here: <http://www.legislation.gov.uk/ukpga/2011/20/schedule/10/enacted>

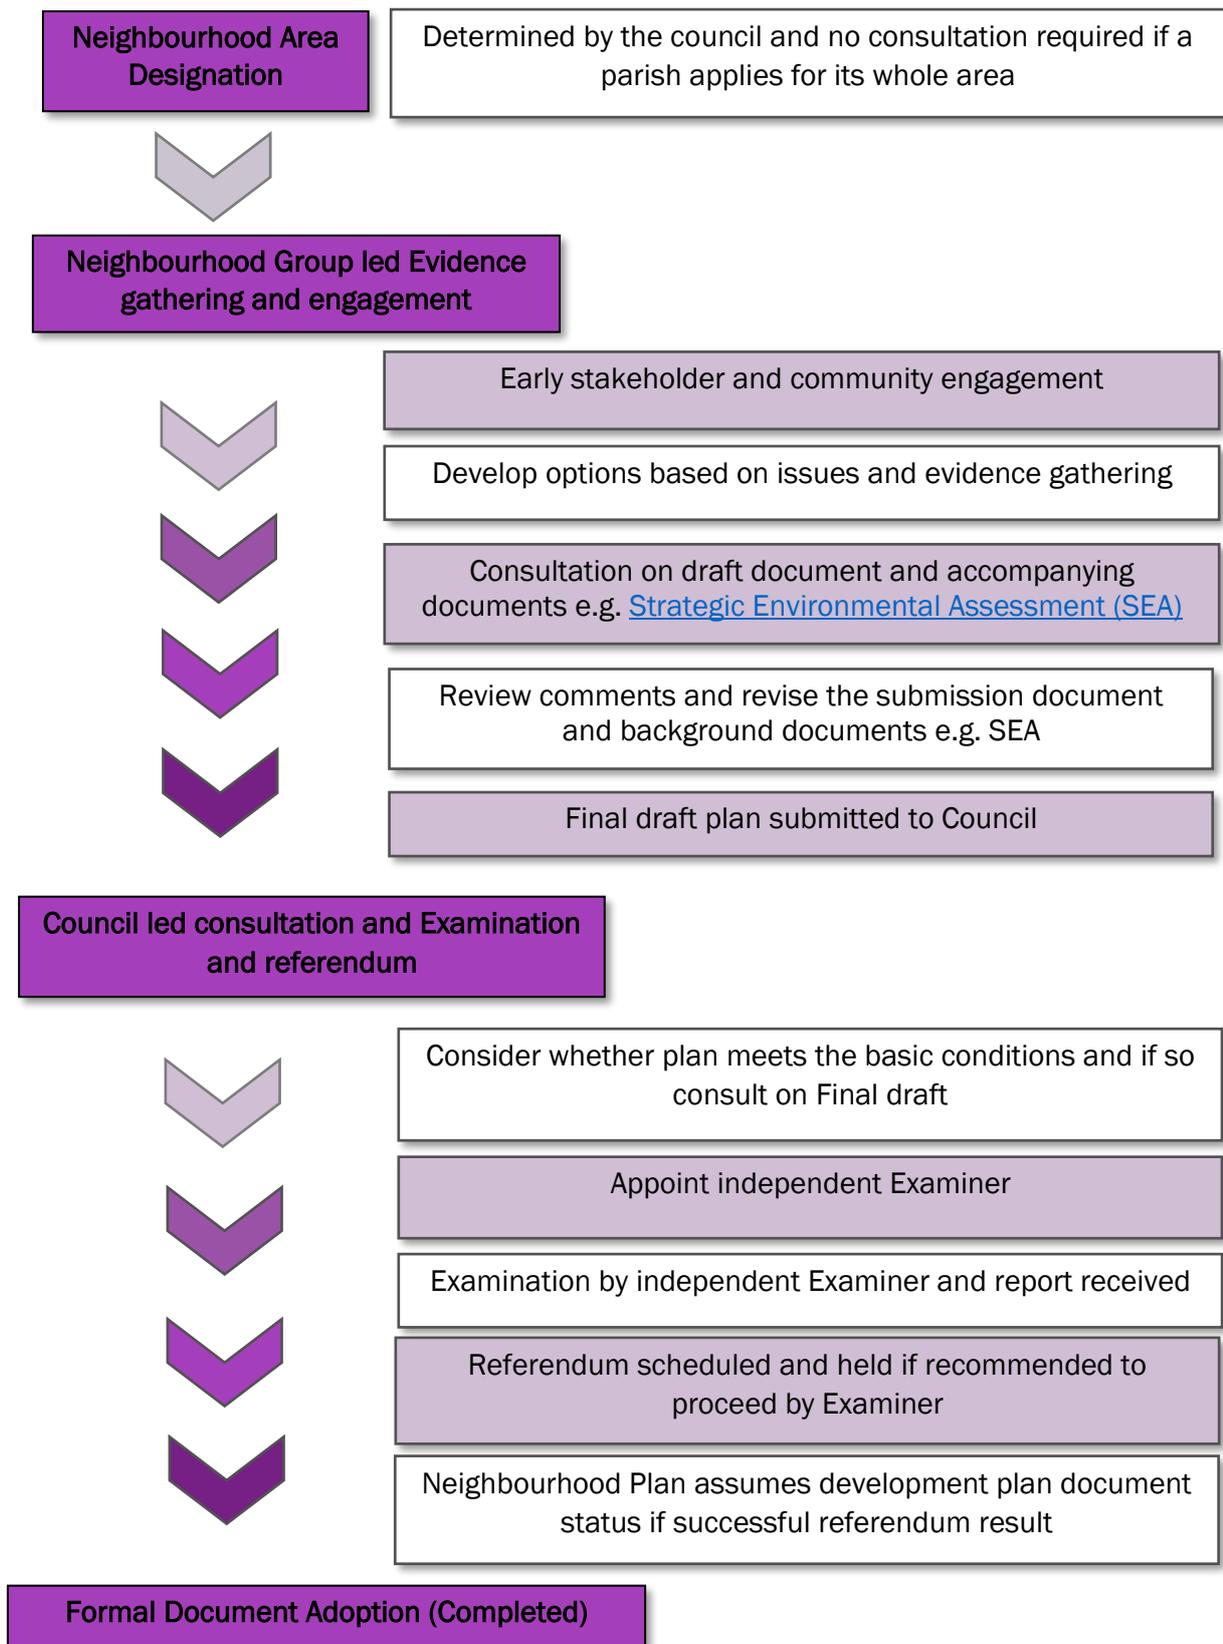

How the Council will support Neighbourhood Planning

Local authorities have a legal duty to provide support to groups preparing a neighbourhood plan. WBC actively supports neighbourhood planning and will work positively and collaboratively with neighbourhood plan groups. In order to support and assist neighbourhood planning, WBC will:

- Based on what the group wish to achieve, provide initial advice on the suitability of pursuing a plan/order, an overview of what is involved and what the potential scope to consider might be;
- share best practice examples from plans or case law;
- provide ongoing advice on general planning matters, share relevant data and technical reports for the evidence base;
- make officers available for meetings, as appropriate, with the neighbourhood planning group to offer informal advice where our specialist knowledge is necessary;
- provide formal written advice in response to specific consultations where considered appropriate;
- create and produce maps as appropriate (please note that the cost of printing will likely fall to the town/parish council)
- highlight national policies which will need to be considered;
- provide advice on the legal requirements for neighbourhood planning;
- share information on key contacts and stakeholders;
- make venues available where appropriate and assist in arranging community engagement activities where support is needed, to avoid consultation overload and maximise efficiencies of resources;
- check the plan prior to formal submission incorporating comments from key specialists (for example development management, highways, conservation, and policy teams etc);
- participate in meetings of the neighbourhood planning body or its working groups, where our specialist knowledge is necessary;
- provide advice on who needs to be consulted especially in order to help the draft proposals meet the basic conditions;
- provide assistance and advice in laying out and illustrating a plan (please note that should significant time be required, the cost of officer time will likely fall to the neighbourhood plan group);
- provide advice regarding the referendum including campaigning can and can't dos.
- organise the examination and referendum

Adopted Neighbourhood Plans are very important planning document which form part of the Council's development plan. They are vital when it comes to making decisions on planning applications.

6. Planning applications

Determination of Planning Applications

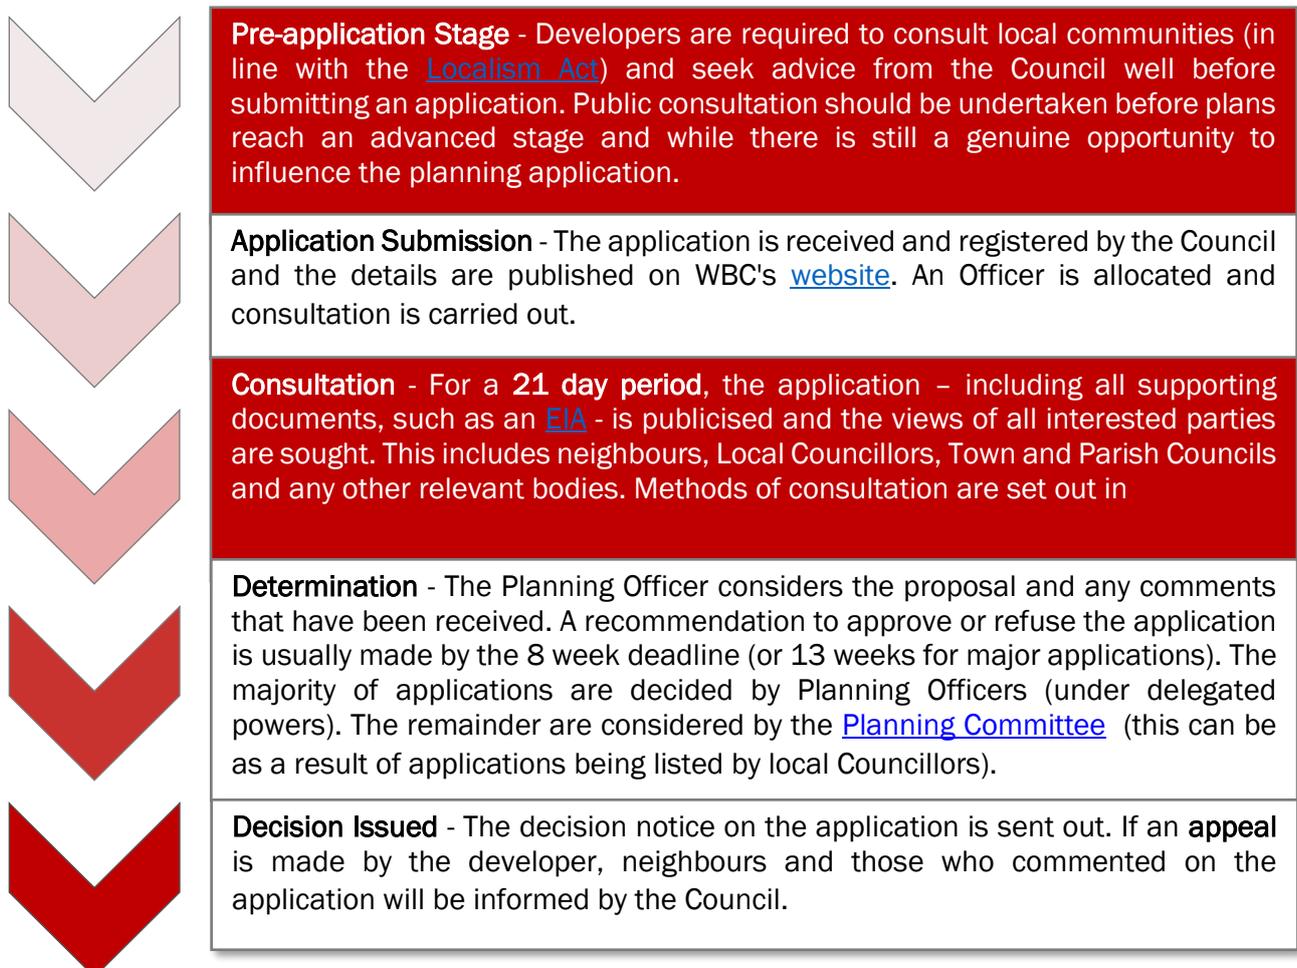

Once a planning application has been received, the Council will take steps to consult on it. The basic steps of determining a planning application are shown in Figure 7 with the main stage(s) of public engagement highlighted in orange. All applications can be viewed on WBC's website by entering the site address or reference number on the applications search page.

Before submitting a planning application it is recommended applicants consult with immediate neighbours and people who may be affected by proposals.

 Public Engagement Stages

Some types of development are allowed automatically under national legislation and do not require a planning application to be submitted, for instance certain types of household extensions or some changes in the use of land or buildings. These are generally referred to as ‘permitted development’. More information about this, including whether the Council needs to notify neighbours about particular permitted development proposals – for example, where a rear extension will be more than 4 metres in length – can be found at www.planningportal.gov.uk.

Methods of Engagement

Wokingham Borough Council will use of a variety of different methods to meet our Three Principles of Inform, Consult, Involve. A number of examples are given in Table 4 (please note this is not intended to be an exhaustive list and the examples given below may relate to both the plan-making and planning application process).

The Council expects that developers should utilise these and other methods to Inform, Consult and Involve those who will be affected by development proposals. This should take place prior to any planning application being made so that the community has an opportunity to engage with and influence proposals in their area.

Table 4: Examples of Methods of Engagement

INFORM – Letting you know about it

- Site Notices
- Websites
- Advertisements in local press
- Press releases
- Notice boards (including Town and Parish Council boards)
- Newsletters, leaflets, magazines
- Public exhibitions
- Email/text messages
- Social media (e.g. Twitter, Facebook)

CONSULT – Asking for your comments on it

- Letters/emails
- Public forums/discussions
- Online forums
- Feedback forms/questionnaires/surveys
- Public meetings (e.g. Planning Committee)
- Public workshops
- Exhibitions

INVOLVE – You can influence how it develops

- Workshops/forums/focus groups
- Councillor surgeries
- Public meetings

Community Engagement in Planning Applications

Planning applications are categorised depending on the type and scale of the proposal. Definitions of each category are given in Appendix 2. Table 5 sets out the common methods of engagement that may be undertaken for different types of planning application. These methods are not intended to be exhaustive and in some cases additional or alternative approaches may be appropriate.

A common criticism of community engagement is that it can be approached as a 'tick-box exercise' in order to meet a list of set requirements. To prevent this being the case, developers are encouraged to seek advice from WBC at an early stage on which methods are likely to be the most appropriate for the type and location of development being proposed. All applications should include a report setting out how consultation has been undertaken and what the outcomes were in order to demonstrate that a genuine attempt has been made to Inform, Consult and Involve the local community.

In each case the Council expects the developer to be actively involved in engaging the community (as indicated in Table 4).

One to one meetings

* Site notices are only required by law for some types of proposed development, e.g. major developments and changes to a listed building. The council however supports the use of site notices for all types of proposed development as an effective way of informing people. Council officers will put up site notices where required by law. For other types of development, a site notice will be sent to the applicant with a request that it is displayed.

This does not apply to all applications – minor and householder applications only require an advertisement in certain circumstances, such as works affecting a listed building.

These one to one meetings tend to be small scale, i.e. a householder meeting with their neighbours to discuss a proposed extension.

†Major housing applications cover 10 up to 199 units. For larger schemes developers should consider that methods like a website and press release would also be appropriate.

These methods or similar can be utilised repeatedly at different stages of the development process (pre-application, submission to the Council and during implementation of the scheme). However early community engagement - as summarised in the table below - will benefit both developers and the community by enabling the creation of appropriate, comprehensive development schemes and enabling subsequent applications to have a smoother progression through the planning system.

For Small Scale Developments:	For Medium/Large Scale Developments:
Developers should inform the local community of proposals before a planning application is made, even if this is just visiting or writing to the immediate neighbours to tell them about plans for an extension. Neighbours' concerns should be taken into account and if necessary changes made to proposals before an application is made.	Engagement must start at an early stage and include various methods to reach as many people as possible. This should include local Councillors and Town and Parish Councils (see Community Contacts section). Community engagement must form an integral part of the initial design process. Developers should show how they have applied the three principles of Inform, Consult and Involve in their application submission and how they used the feedback to inform the proposal.

Quality engagement means collaboration: consulting and involving people as well as informing them (in line with the Three Principles).

More information about methods of engagement can be found online, for example the RTPI website which provides Good Practice Guides (available at www.rtpi.org.uk).

Please note that where it is required, consultation for permitted development schemes differs from that for planning applications. More information about this is available at www.planningportal.gov.uk

Hard to Reach Groups

The Council also recognises that certain parts of the community are more difficult to engage using traditional methods. This can be for a variety of reasons. The Council will seek to engage with all of the groups who may be affected by proposed development as well as expecting developers to do the same. Table 6 gives examples of how this may be achieved:

Table 6: Engaging Hard to Reach Groups

Group	How to Engage Them
Young People	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> - Websites - Young peoples' forums - Online forums - Emails/texts - Social media - Displays at schools, colleges, libraries, youth centres, local businesses (e.g. cafes, bars), sports grounds - School Councils - Youth MP - Competitions (e.g. photography, creative writing)

How will we use your comments?

The written comments that are made on a planning application will be taken into account in the decision-making process.

More information about material planning considerations can be found online at www.planningportal.gov.uk. All of the comments received are made available for the public on the Council’s website, where comments are directly uploaded by members of the public themselves.

The Case Officer’s report for every planning application quantifies the amount of comments received during the consultation period and summarises the main points raised. The report goes on to explain the recommendation to either approve or refuse and is made available for all members of the public to view once the application has been determined.

In the case of an appeal, the Planning Inspector will also look at all of the consultation responses received when reaching a decision.

Planning Committee

The Planning Committee is made up of elected Borough Councillors (often referred to as Ward Members). To assist the Planning Committee, Council Officers will provide a report on the proposed development. The report will set out relevant planning policy, provide a summary of the comments received from interested people and organisations, and make a recommendation on whether permission should be granted.

Only certain types of applications go to the Committee – such as major applications or minor applications with strong public interest which can be listed by the relevant Borough Councillor for that area to be determined by Committee. Planning Committee meetings are open to the public and anybody has the right to speak on an application, provided that they have prearranged to do so.

This must be done by 5pm on the last working day before the meeting. The agenda for the meeting – including the Council Officer report for each application – is published on the Council’s website a week beforehand.

There are three dedicated speaking slots per application for the Borough Councillor, a representative of the Town/Parish Council and the applicant, and one additional slot for any other interested parties (usually residents) who have arranged to address the Committee. Each slot is allocated a maximum of three minutes for speakers to make their points; if several residents wish to speak then the combined length has to fit into the specified three minute time limit. It is therefore recommended that if large numbers of people share similar views on an application then they should organise a spokesperson to represent them. After each Planning Committee the minutes of the meeting are made available to view on the Council's website.

In the event that a planning application is to be determined by Committee, anybody that has commented on the planning application will be notified of proceedings.
